

D. Olson, Toronto

Footnotes to Goody's "Literacy thesis": Three conceptions of literacy.

In this talk I consider three advances in our understanding of literacy. The nature of writing and written language in relation to speaking, the social nature of reading and reading publics, and the institutionalization of literacy in the practices of governing.

These advances require us to distinguish three conceptions of literacy in describing the implications of literacy.